

Holocaust Memorial Day – 27 January

January 2022

The World Summit for Social Development established the concept of social inclusion to create an inclusive society where every individual, each with rights and responsibilities, has an active role to play in an environment that is stable, safe, just and tolerant, respects diversity, culture and equality of opportunity.

As we continue to deal with one of the greatest challenges for generations, it is a pivotal moment to help and support one another and to be actively inclusive. In difficult times people get anxious so inclusion can create opportunities for a sense of belonging, strength, encouragement, consideration, kindness and support with well-being at the core.

In this year's calendar we look to key actions to drive equality, diversity and inclusion and help mitigate the adverse impact challenging times can have on everyone.

February 2022

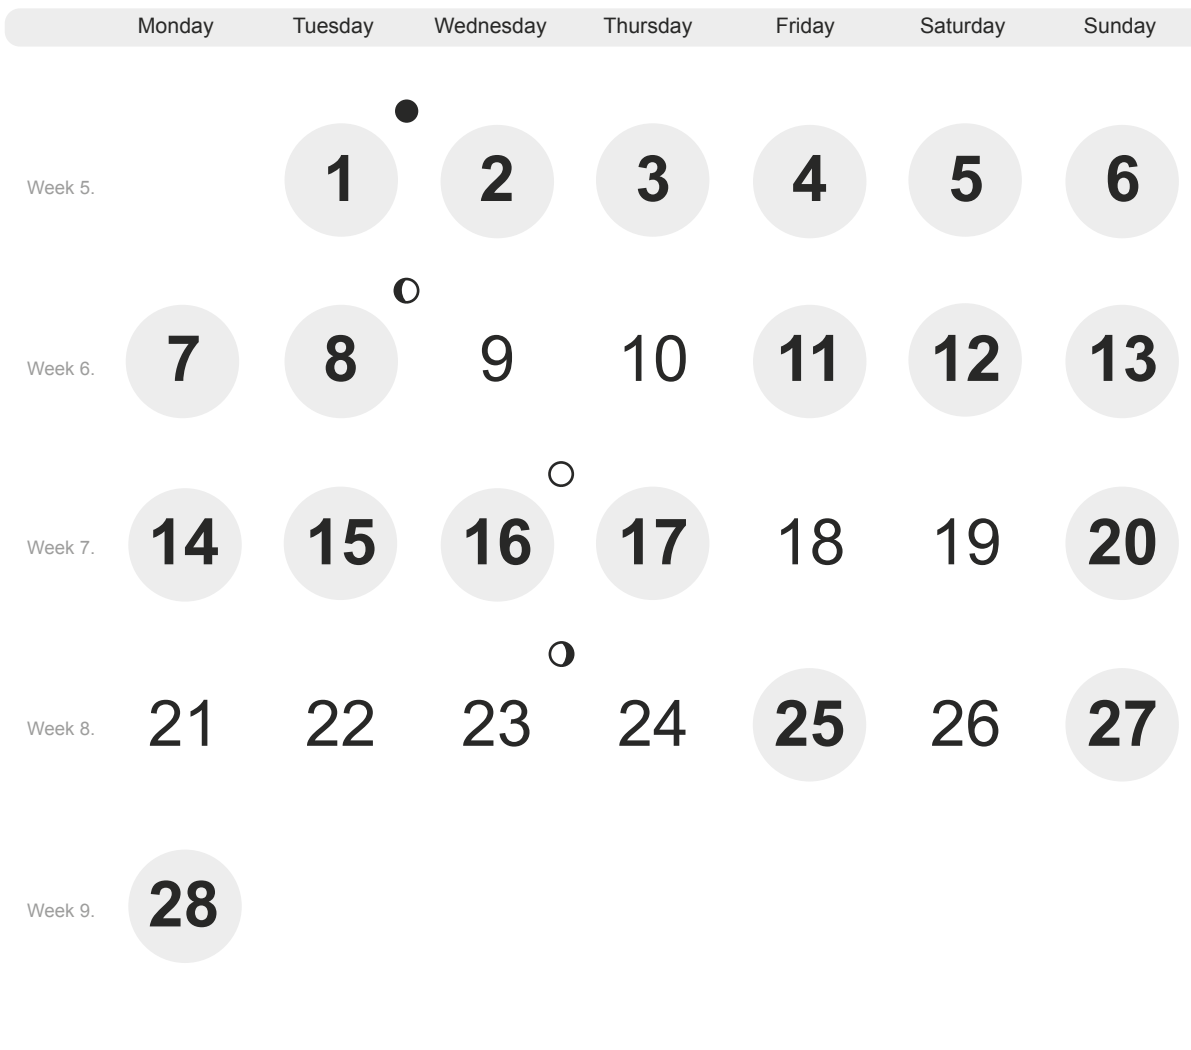

Race Equality

“The ultimate measure of a person is not where one stands in moments of comfort and convenience, but where one stands in times of challenge and controversy.”

Martin Luther King.

The disproportionate impact of coronavirus on Black, Asian and Minority Ethnic (BAME) people to die from the disease highlighted and exacerbated continuing inequalities in education, health, incomes, employment and housing.

Now more than ever it is vital for organisations to review and strengthen their Race Equality Strategy and ensure this is supported by a comprehensive Action Plan. It is important to act decisively around race equality and inclusion.

International Women's Day – 08 March

March 2022

Gender Equality

“We need to do a better job of putting ourselves higher on our own ‘to do’ list.”
Michelle Obama.

Likened to a shadow pandemic is the rapidly unravelling precious progress that has been made towards gender equality. Women’s jobs are more vulnerable in this crisis and together with the spike in domestic violence, rapid increase in unpaid domestic and care work and the risk shouldered by the world’s nurses, predominately women, means the social and economic toll will be paid disproportionately by girls and women.

We cannot underestimate the extraordinary and indispensable contributions of women across all sectors. Women need to be given equal opportunities in leadership and decision-making roles and efforts must be made to reduce gender inequality.

Use of Inclusive Language

“Language changes... But we need to be aware that as our language changes, so does our theology change... This is what is happening with our attempts at inclusive language, which thus far have been inconclusive and unsuccessful.”
Madeline L'Engle.

It is important to recognize that language has the ability to build relationships and forge connections, but it's equally liable for creating barriers and impacting on someone's sense of belonging.

Inclusive language avoids jargon, acronyms, biases, slang, or expressions that discriminate. Being inclusive requires us to be welcoming, positive, encouraging and to reach out to others in our language, writing and actions.

Mental Health Awareness Week – 10-16 May

May 2022

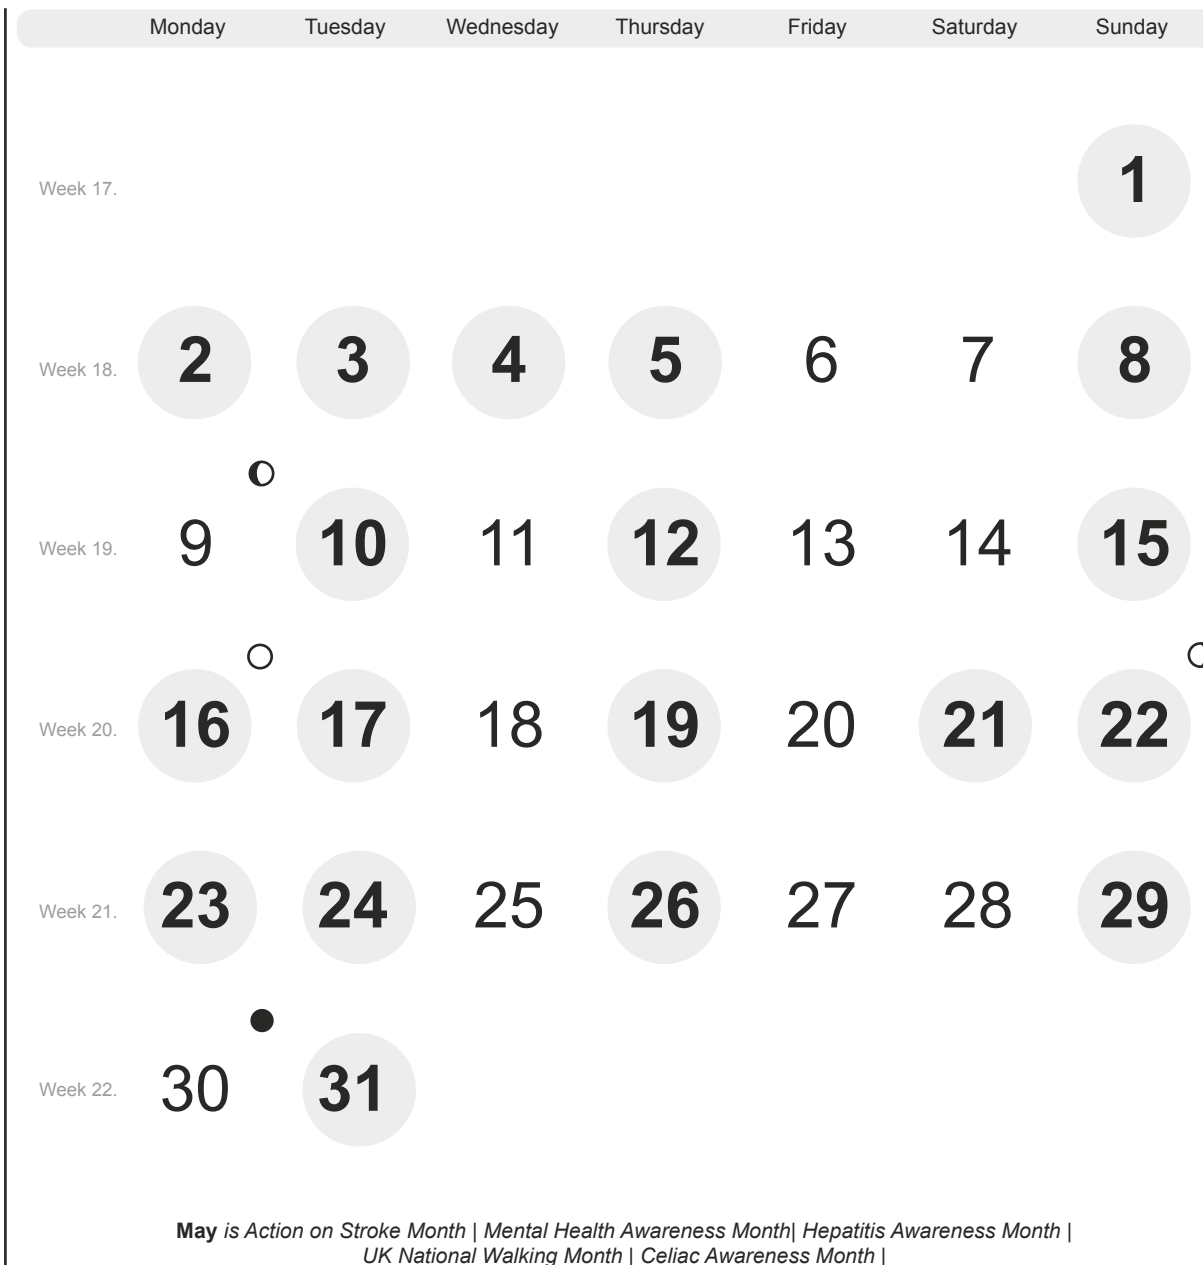

Well-being

“Your well-being must never become an afterthought. It must be your first act.”

Rasheed Ongunlaru.

Good mental health and well-being is an asset. However due to the pandemic there has been a significant impact to mental health through increased exposure to all kinds of stressors. This has resulted in increased levels of anxiety, worry, stress and fear.

Workplace well-being has taken on a whole new meaning and managers will need to be compassionate and understanding that many people will need time to re-adjust when working life returns to some sort of normality. Ensuring well-being requires all staff to be observant, to ask, to listen and to be proactive in engaging with others.

June 2022

LGBTQ+

“Never be bullied into silence. Never allow yourself to be made a victim. Accept no one’s definition of your life; define yourself.”
Harvey Fierstein.

Though challenging for everyone, for some LGBTQ+ people the pandemic came with added hardships. Abuse and non-acceptance whilst isolating with their families, a loss of friends, support networks and susceptibility to mental health issues due to discrimination has resulted in a more anxious and traumatic experience.

Organisations should continue efforts to advance LGBTQ+ inclusion and play a pivotal role in shaping the lives and well-being of LGBTQ+ employees and their families. Robust LGBTQ+ inclusive policies and practices will ensure the safety and security of LGBTQ+ staff and their representatives.

Religion and Belief

“We may have different religions, different languages, different coloured skin, but we all belong to one human race.” Kofi Annan.

The pandemic has slowed everyone down and destabilised regular routine. It's become an exploratory time with people developing new interests, hobbies and pastimes and a period of reflection, finding new ways of living. Many faith groups have discovered innovative ways of connecting with people and unlocking new audiences.

Religious coping is positively associated with mental health outcomes in terms of quality of life, sense of meaning, source of comfort, acceptance and hope. Organisations should continue promoting a work environment where religion, belief and spirituality are seen as opportunities for positive enquiry and everyone is treated with respect.

Working Lives

“Remote work is this incredible invitation to really get good at building inclusive cultures.”

Shane Metcalfe.

The working world is in transition as we adapt to new work norms. Home working with family responsibilities, isolation and well-being concerns, offers new challenges for individuals. Businesses are addressing work systems, accountability and teamwork challenges. Efficiencies of cost and time savings with remote working are asking new questions of all of us.

Inclusion, trust and responsibility must be at the heart of our new and adapting working arrangements. In many cases they can offer us the opportunity to design afresh rather than revise the old.

Acknowledge holidays of all religions and cultures

“The essence of all religions is one. Only their approaches are different.”
Mahatma Gandhi.

Events to mark important religious festivals and celebrations have been curtailed or restricted by the pandemic. Holidays usually spent with family, friends and community were celebrated very differently. With staff now at home, organisations were unable to mark or acknowledge religious celebrations or holidays.

To build awareness of diversity and foster greater inclusivity organisations can highlight and acknowledge the variety of upcoming religious festivals and cultural holidays. This can be done through an inclusion calendar, company intranet or website, staff networks, training, celebration events etc.

Ageism

“Aging is not lost youth but a new stage of opportunity and strength.”
Betty Friedan.

The pandemic highlighted the challenges faced by older people, especially around the care and support they received, their ability to stay socially connected and the anxiety and fear of illness and death.

It reminds us that different cultures treat older people differently. Many Eastern societies associate old age with wisdom and so value old age much more than their Western counterparts.

All of us can become more inclusive in our thinking so that we don't just tolerate older people. We can reach out, engage and learn. We can embrace a level of experience and understanding that only comes with age.

Building Community

"The greatness of a community is most accurately measured by the compassionate actions of its members."
Coretta Scott King.

The Covid pandemic showed us that collaboration and inclusion are a priority. As a result, we are learning to build community from within our organisations, reaching out not only to staff and customers, but also to our wider connections of family and the world at large.

Building community is now a development priority for many organisations. It offers new ways of bringing people together to leverage their collective experience, address priority issues, tackle poverty and disadvantage, and build all that matters to us.

Disability Champions

“So many of our dreams at first seem impossible, then they seem improbable, and then, when we summon the will, they soon become inevitable.”

Christopher Reeve.

People living with disabilities have been disproportionately impacted by Covid and have faced many barriers such as a potentially higher risk of contracting the virus due to underlying conditions or have difficulty engaging in preventative measures or experienced disruptions to health and social services they normally rely on.

Appointing Disability Champions can be a key strategy towards achieving disability inclusion. They can ensure that the inclusion of people with disability always remains on the agenda, particularly during challenging transitional periods.

Our standard online PDF calendar is now designed and produced in a format which allows universal access so that content can be used by as many people as possible including people with disabilities or vision impairment.

It makes it easier for people with disabilities to access the calendar with the aid of assistive technology software and devices like screen magnifiers, screen readers, speech-recognition software, text-to-speech software, alternative input devices and refreshable Braille displays.

This is also offered as an option in our Bespoke online PDF calendars as well.

The main benefits of an accessible calendar include:

- Reaching a wider audience
- Increased inclusion
- Improved organisational image and profile
- Better engagement
- Increased usability
- Provides greater participation and sense of belonging for many staff
- Complements and brings greater value to overall equality, diversity and inclusion activities
